CELEBRATING 60 YEARS

In honor of the Catholic University Law Review's 60th Anniversary, the Editorial Board would like to extend to you our appreciation for your continued support in our publication of timely, legal scholarship.

Since its inception in 1950, the Law Review has grown from eight to nearly eighty members. Cumulatively, the Law Review has published 49,920 pages of text, almost 800 lead articles, 893 student articles, and dozens of essays, book reviews, and special pieces. Certainly, the Law Review owes its present-day success to the feats of the past fifty-nine volumes, all of which are characterized by the unwavering commitment of the Law Review's alumni and sponsorship, as well as the faculty, staff, and administration of the Columbus School of Law.

In particular, the Editorial Board wishes to express its utmost gratitude to its former faculty advisor, Professor Ralph Rohner, and its current faculty advisor, Professor Roger Hartley. Both professors, during their tenures as faculty advisors to the Law Review, have worked selflessly to develop and maintain the standard of excellence characteristic of today's journal. Professors Rohner and Hartley—thank you for your invaluable support, guidance, and wisdom; your inspiration, motivation, and encouragement; and most importantly, your friendship.

Thank you for sharing in our celebration of this exciting milestone.
