1971

Summae on Raymond de Pennafort's Summa de Casibus in the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich

Kenneth Pennington

The Catholic University of America, Columbus School of Law

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarship.law.edu/scholar
Part of the Religion Law Commons

Recommended Citation
Kenneth Pennington, Summae on Raymond de Pennafort's Summa de Casibus in the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich, 27 TRADITIO 471 (1971).
Lastly, a further, rather general parallel is found in the commentary associated with Bernard Silvester on Aeneid I-VI. In the accessus to this commentary, integumentum is explained in some detail. The term is given the same range of meaning as in the Super Thebaiden and the same lines of the Ars Poetica are cited in support of its method.21 The Thebaid commentary, in fact, refers so briefly to this definition that one is tempted to assume that it was a later, hasty redaction of it, and that the work is, in a sense, a set of ‘lecture notes.’

To turn briefly to the second part of the accessus, the literary figure illustrating allegory, the above argument appears to be confirmed. The author states that the sensus litteralis is like the shell of a nut in which the sensus misticus is the fruit.22 This division was of course a commonplace in later medieval commentaries. The ‘renaissance’ of classical studies in the twelfth century borrowed from theology the idea that a text—literary or even scientific—might have many levels of meaning. The threefold (or fourfold) plan of scriptural exegesis however was normally simplified by commentators on secular texts. For instance, William of Conches distinguishes between the literal and allegorical senses in his brilliant commentary on Plato’s Timaeus.23 The above-cited commentary on the De nuptiis does the same.

In conclusion, while too much weight should not be placed on the evidence, it would be reasonable to suppose that Super Thebaiden was not written in the sixth century but in the twelfth. Based upon the accessus, the period 1120-1180 might be proposed as limiting dates. The author also seems to have drawn heavily on the kind of literal theory being practised in commentaries on the classics in the Loire valley, in Paris, and, above all, in Chartres.

Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies

Brian Stock

SUMMAE ON RAYMOND DE PENNAFORT’S
‘SUMMA DE CASIBUS’ IN THE BAYERISCHE STAATSBIBLIOTHEK, MUNICH*

Since Schulte first examined the various summae casuum and summae confessorum,¹ a number of studies by Dietterle, Teetaert, Michaud-Quantin and

---

21 Commentum Bernardi Silvestris super sex libros Eneidos Virgilli, ed. W. Riedel (Greifswald 1924) 3ff. The Cambridge commentary on Martianus Capella does not cite Horace, but the same idea is expressed in the section on sermo and ratio, fol. 1a-1b.

22 Ed. Helm, p. 180: ‘In nuce enim duo sunt, testa et nucleus, sic in carminibus poeticiis duo, sensus litteralis et misticus. Latet nucleus sub testa; latet sub sensu litterali iste intelligenti. ‘ The comparison, of course, is derived from the physical sense of tegumentum and consciously moves towards its non-physical sense as ‘allegory.’

* I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Alexander von Humboldt Stiftung for assistance while completing this study, and Professors S. Kuttner and J. John for their comments.

¹ J. F. von Schulte, Geschichte der Quellen und Literatur des canonischen Rechts II (Stuttgart 1877) 408-56.
others have appeared to chart this region of canonical literary history. However, there are a number of anonymous summae in the Munich Staatsbibliothek which throw some light on the early development of this literary form.

The most interesting of these works are two hitherto unknown summae which were written on the first recension of Raymond’s Summa de casibus. This immediate flurry of literary activity attests to the swift acceptance of Raymond’s Summa as the major work in penitential literature (an acceptance that is reminiscent, I might add, of the reception of Gratian’s Decretum). These summae were adaptations and summaries of Raymond’s Summa. They evidently were intended to give the friars a basic knowledge of legal problems involved in confessional work, without demanding of them the knowledge of canon law which they would have needed to study Raymond’s Summa at first hand. Not everyone, however, was content to use Raymond’s Summa as a basis for further discussion of the problems in the forum poenitentiae. Shortly after Raymond had finished his Summa in its final version (c. 1234), an anonymous author wrote ‘Quia non pigris’ (below, section III), which was not nearly as successful as Raymond’s.

Raymond’s Summa maintained its dominance throughout the Middle Ages. In the 1280s though, Johannes of Freiburg’s Summa confessorum, which was very dependent on Raymond’s work, usurped the primacy of Raymond’s Summa to a certain extent. Although summae such as Burchard of Strassburg’s popular work were still written after this (and a tradition of summae based on that of Johannes was begun), the works on Raymond’s Summa in the fourteenth and

---

5 Michaud-Quantin lists a number of manuscripts of Burchard’s Summa. To these may be added Clm 4595 fol. 42r-199r and Frankfurt Stadtbibl. Praed. 170 fol. 1r-40r.

6 Guillaume de Ceyxe’s Summa is one of the best-known. See Dietterle 26.59-63. Michaud-Quantin lists four manuscripts. To these may be added Clm 585 fol. 2r-191v. Since the incipit and explicit as given by Dietterle (the explicit is probably improperly transcribed) and Michaud-Quantin are inadequate to distinguish Guillaume’s Summa from others of this type, I give the beginning and end from Clm 585. ‘Incipit summula confessorum. (title De symonia) Quoniam inter ecclesiastica crimina, symoniaca heresis obtinet primum locum, ut patet infra q.ult... Quid est symonia? Dic secundum Hostiensem fifteenth centuries were, in the style of the age, generally metrical and of little juridical value.7

The following summae were written on Raymond’s Summa de casibus in the thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries. They all (except for ‘Quia non pigris’) followed the organization of Raymond’s Summa. They have, therefore, the same titles that Raymond used (although the wording of the titles varies slightly) and the same divisions into three or four books. Although only further study can determine the value of these summae, it is clear that they rather soon degenerated into what seems to be purely didactical writing such as ‘Quid sit symonia.’ While the discussions in the earliest summae have historical and juridical importance, the later ones are often content to do what some of their titles explicitly state, i.e. merely to epitomize or abbreviate. Aside from the summae listed in Schulte, Michaud-Quantin and below, Teetaert has examined a work of this type. The Munich Staatsbibliothek also has a manuscript of this summa.8 Because of the similarity of the incipits, I have attempted to name the summae from a characteristic phrase taken from the first few lines of the text in order to differentiate one text from the other.

I. Summae on Raymond’s First Recension (Three Books)9

A. ‘Symonia . . . ut ius patronatus’

A summa in Clm 6020 fol. 8rv-36vb and Clm 14094 fol. 110r-137r represents an example of the earliest works written on the Summa de casibus. All the decretal citations are to the Compilationes antiquae. Further, there are not any references to the legislation of Gregory IX which Raymond incorporated into his second recension. Under the title De voto, the author repeated the comment that Raymond made about his being the judge in a certain case, a comment which was deleted in the second recension because of subsequent legislation of Gregory IX.10

8 Teetaert 318-20. Clm 8021 fol. 59ra-291rb. Teetaert lists Clm 585 and 7212 as this Summa, but they are not (cf. supra n. 6).
9 Kuttner, ‘Entstehungsgeschichte’ first established the existence of two different recensions of the Summa de casibus.
10 Clm 6020 fol. 12rv-13ra and Clm 14094 fol. 155r. This text from the first recension is printed by Kuttner, ‘Entstehungsgeschichte’ 424-5. The text is from Clm 1409. ‘Tamen Honorious constituit quod infra tempus probationis potest quilibet libere ad seculum redire.

Explicit (title De satisfaecitone): Nota poestatem ligandi atque soluendi accipit quilibet cum ordinatur presbyter, sed executionem officii non habet, nisi sibi prius ab episcopo conferatur.

B. Symonia... secundum Vincentium et Ambrosium'

Another sumna on the first recension is found in Clm 7208 fol. 1va-42rb, 43va-53va (fol. 42r and 43r are blank). The anonymous author cited the Comp. ant. and, as in the previous summa, he did not refer to Gregorian legislation; he also repeated the section about Raymond's judgeship.11 The author called Laurentius, Tancred and Johannes Teutonicus 'doctores mei.'12 He showed a marked preference for the opinions of Tancred and Johannes Teutonicus.

Incepit (title De symonia): Symonia est studioa cupititas uel voluntas emendi uel uendendii aliquid spirituale; nec oportet addi 'uel spirituali annexum' quia annexum spirituali spirituale est. Item distingue secundum Vincentium et Ambrosium quibus consentio, quedam < sunt > prohibita et symoniae ut emere uel uendere sacramenta.

Explicit (title De impedimentis penitentiae): Donet deus ut uniuseri per hanc angustiam portam intrare iuxta consilium domini contendamus, per eum qui uiiuit in eternum.13

*cupititas uel add. marg. Clm 6020

Quod tamen intellige si infra triduum exierit [exeruit Clm 6020]. Quia tunc intelligitur quod sine deliberatione intrauriet. Ego fui super hoc casu [hunc casum Clm 6020] inde, tamen in iudicio penitentiae non consulerem ei quod possent redire ad seculum, si composit mentis intrauerit. Si autem ultra triduum steterit, non potest redire. Si quis intrurit religionem dissolutam et ad tales uiam se obliguat... Clm 6020 fol. 36v*-39r* has Bona-guida Aretinu's De dispensationibus. Also on fol. 118r*-132r* is Paul of Hungary's De confessione. This tract is also in Clm 7208 fol. 54v*-68r* and Clm 665 fol. 137*-144r*. On this tract see Michaud-Quantin, Sommes de casuistique 24-26.

11 Clm 7208 fol. 10v*-h.

12 Clm 7208 fol. 28r* (title De raptoribus) 'Et hanc opinionem tenent omnes doctores mei, silicet Laur. T. et Joh.' This manuscript also contains Tancred's Summa de matrimonio (finius deest) fol. 68v*-69v*. Just as Tancred's Summa was added to Raymond's first recension as the fourth book, it was also added to this commentary on Raymond's Summa.

13 Another Summa found in a fifteenth-century manuscript Clm 3042 fol. 244v*-283r* has four books; the first three books seem to be based in large part on the Summa in Clm 7208. Schulte, Geschichte der Quellen II 532 and M. Bloomfield, 'A Preliminary List of Incipits of Latin Works on the Virtues and Vices, Mainly of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries,' Traditio 11 (1955) 259-379 at 365, refer to this work as 'Quid sit symonia.' Incepit (title De symonia, <Quid sit symonia>): 'Symonia est studioa cupititas uel voluntas emendi uel uendendi aliquid spirituale; nec oportet addi uel spirituali annexum quia annexus spirituali, spirituale est. Tamen nota distincte secundum Vincentium (MS inuicencud), Ambrosium, quibus assentio, quedam sunt prohibita quia symoniae ut uendere et emere sacramenta.' Explicit (title De sacramentis): 'Ecc extrema unctio ac si dicetur, "Iam dicit spiritus ut requiescant a laboribus suis, " [Apoc. 14.13]. Amen. Qui scripsit, sit benedictus. 1468, finitus est in vi° Martii' (MS Mathei).
II. Summae on Raymond’s Second Recension (Four Books)

A. ‘Quid est et unde dicatur’

The most sophisticated of these summae is one which is contained in Clm 18755 fol. 28v-98v. It was written on Raymond’s second recension, but in the first part (to fol. 28v) under the title De furtis only the Comp. ant. were cited. There is, however, at this point a change of scribes, and this probably accounts for the change in the method of citation. One may assume that the original work cited the Comp. ant. throughout (or that the Gregoriana was published while the author was working on the Summa; but this is unlikely, for the author probably would not have published the summa without revising the first section). The author discussed the decretales of Gregory IX which Raymond had added to the second recension and expunged almost all of the material peculiar to the first recension. Yet the author still cited the Comp. ant. Could one conclude from these facts that he finished writing before the promulgation of the Gregoriana in 1234 and that Raymond himself may have finished his second recension before that date? One would imagine that the author had a second-recension copy of Raymond’s Summa before him, with citations still to the Comp. ant. Manuscripts of this type do exist for Raymond’s second recension. But without an examination of the entire manuscript tradition, this must remain an hypothesis.

Incipit (title De symonia) Quid est et unde dicatur? Symonia est studiosa cupiditas uel voluntas emendi uel uendendi aliquod spirituale, et hic spirituale uocatur etiam annexum spirituali. infra q.ii et extra de iure patronatus. Et nota quod secundum Ambrosium quaedam sunt prohibita quia symoniacas ut uendere uel emere sacramenta.

Explicit (title De dotibus): C. de impensis in rebus dotalibus factis i.i. Voluptarias uero perdit sicut ibi dicitur, ut forte si pingat uel eiusmodi.

B. ‘Quid sit symonia’

There are two manuscripts of a summa that R. Weigand first discovered in Innsbruck University MS 368, which he dubbed ‘Quid sit symonia’. They are Clm 9664 fol. 1ra-84v and Clm 7802 col. 7ta-136v. Upon examining this text, 14 There is one bit of the first recension on fol. 17ro (De decimis): ‘De feodo dico quod si ecclesia recipit in pignore feodium quod miles tenet per eam, si durante pignore recipit ab eo seruitium feodi, tenetur fructus computare in sortem, aliter non. extra illi de feod. Vel dic si ecclesia recipit pagesiam siue coloniam rustici sui in pignore, debet computare in sortem fructus deducto iure suo et laboribus et expensis.’ The use of the Catalan expression ‘pagesia’ is found only in the first recension. Kuttner, ‘Entstehungsgeschichte’ 427.

15 There are two such manuscripts in Munich: Clm 6040 has Raymond’s second-recension changes and additions added in the margin. Within these additions, the decretal references are to the Comp. ant. Further, Clm 7631 has the text of the second recension, but its decretal references are only to the Comp. ant. Great caution is, however, indicated. Instances are known of scribes’ mixing the two recensions (Kuttner, ‘Entstehungsgeschichte’ 422); as for Clm 6040 I checked all the decretal references to the Comp. ant. in the marginal additions, and only one of the citations was correctly attributed to the proper Comp. ant. (fol. 48r ‘ex illi de donat. Cum dilecti’). In several instances Gregory IX’s decretales were cited as being one of the Comp. ant. (e.g. fol. 61r ‘ex. i de sent. et re iud. Duobus’). For the manuscripts of the Summa de casibus in Munich see Traditio 26 (1970) 435-40.

it became clear that this work was written on Raymond's Summa and the Apparatus which Guillaume de Rennes (Redonensis) wrote for Raymond's Summa. The letters a. and t. which occur frequently in the text refer to Guillaume's apparatus and Raymond's textus respectively. Since, as far as I could determine, the author did not use Johannes of Freiburg, one would suppose that 'Quid sit symonia' was written between 1245 and 1290. A paragraph taken from the beginning of the summa will show the method that the author employed. Sometimes he quoted the gloss and the text verbatim, but more often he merely summarized their opinions. (In the following text the sections quoted exactly are italicized).

Incepit (title De symonia) [Clm 9664 fol. 1ra] Quid sit? * Symonia est studiosa cupiditas uel voluntas emendi uel uendendi aliquid spirituale uel sibi annexum. \(^{19}\) Studiosa a. \(^{b}\) Idest in actum exteriem progressius. \(^{20}\) t. Et nomine emptionis uel uenditionis intelligas omnem contractum non gratuitem preter contractum permutationis. \(^{21}\) a. Contractus est ultra citraque obligatio. \(^{22}\) Queritur utrum sola voluntas faciat symoniacum? Respondet quod sic in emptione uel uenditione eorum quae prohibita sunt quia symoniaca, ut uendere uel emere\(^{c}\) sacraenta, et breuiter omnia que in utroque testamento symoniaca erant. \(^{23}\) a. Quantum ad peccatum etiam in limitibus suis, uero non quantum ad irregularitatem, nisi profreddiatur in actum pacisce ndi. \(^{24}\)

Explicit (title De dotibus et donationibus propter nuptias): Preterea notandum est quod maritus in reddenda dote impensas necessarias et utiles in rebus dotalibus factas potest retinere, uloluptarias uero perdit. a. Etiam factas de mulieriis uoluntate\(^{e}\) etc. Finito libro sit laus et gloria Christo.

C. 'Quoniam inter crimina... uidendum est quid sit symonia'.

Another summa of the 'Quid sit symonia’ type is found in Clm 7821 fol. \(^{1\text{rb}}\)-220va. Like 'Quid sit symonia’ it is a work which explicated and summarized Raymond’s text and Guillaume’s apparatus. \(^{25}\)

Incepit (title De symonia): Quoniam inter crimina ecclesiastica symoniaca heresis primum obtinet locum, uidendum est quid sit symonia. W. Crimina ecclesiastica sunt quorum cognitio pertinet ad ecclesiasticum iudicem; secularia uero que pertinet ad iudicem secularem.

Explicit (title De dote): Nota quod maritus expensis necessarias et utiles in rebus dotalibus factas, puta quia domum refecit, potest repetere. Voluntarias [sic] uero potest perdere.

\(\star\)symonia deest codd. \(\star\)apparatus Clm 7802 \(\star\)uendere uel emere add.\(^{2}\) marg. Clm 7802, sunt Clm 9664.

\(\star\)uoluptate codd.

\(^{17}\) On Guillaume de Rennes, who wrote his Apparatus circa 1240-1245, see Dietterle 24.542-8; Michaud-Quantin, Sommes de casuistique 40-41.

\(^{19}\) See Summa de casibus (Rome 1603) 3.

\(^{20}\) Ibid. s.v. studiosa.

\(^{21}\) Ibid. 5.

\(^{22}\) Ibid. s.v. contractum.

\(^{23}\) Ibid. 4; Raymond’s text is greatly summarized here.

\(^{24}\) Ibid. s.v. non sufficit sola voluntas, also summarized.

\(^{25}\) A Summa very similar to this one is found in Frankfurt Stadtbibl. Praed. 154 fol. 1\(^{v}\)-219\(^{v}\).
D. ‘Qui stat . . . premittit quia’ and ‘Verbum abbreuiatum . . . premittit quia’

There is a summa in Clm 14789 fol. 2r-74v which corresponds closely to the description of it given in the catalogue, ‘Summa Raymundi abbreuiata.’ In fact, in the prologue the author explicitly stated that his purpose was to abbreuiate Raymond’s Summa.

Inciptit prologus: Qui stat, uideat ne cadat, ait apostolus. Videns enim apostolus homines ad casum uitiorum ab adolescentia sua procliuis, dicente domino, proni sunt sensus hominis in malum.

Inciptit (title De symonia) Premittit quia hoc plurimum sapit naturam peccati. Peccatum enim auersio <est> a bono incommutabili ad bonum commutabile. Symonia directe obuiat spiritu sancto cui bonitas appropriatur.

Explicit (title De dotibus) Puta quod domum refeicit, potest retinere, ut C. de impensis in rebus dotis factis l.I. Voluptarias uero perdit, sicut ibi dicitur.

Licit autem tam super dote quam super aliis articulis plurima fuissent, ut* plena* noticia in causis matrimonialibus habetur, dicenda, hec tamen que premissa sunt, breuilat causa sufficient. Super operis imperfectione ueniam postulans. Et que corrigenda uiderit et addenda, non inuidenti animo sed benigno corrigat et emendet.

There are three more manuscripts which contain a summa that is closely related to the above work, but differs from it in small ways. Generally, however, it follows the text of the summa in Clm 14789. It is also provided with a different prologue. It is found in three Munich MSS, Clm 665 fol. 145r*-199vb*, Clm 9528 fol. 102ra*-131rb*, Clm 22293 fol. 149ra*-178ra.*

Inciptit (title De symonia): Premittit hic quia hec plurimum sapit naturam peccati. Peccatum enim est auersio a bono incommutabili ad bonum commutabile. Symonia uero directe obuiat spiritui sancto cui bonitas appropriatur.

---

MS ubi
26 Clm 14789 fol. 2r. ‘Porro quoniam etiam omne bonum <de> facili in hoc tempore potest esse fastidii, gaudentque breuiat moderni gratum duxi . . . ad utilitatem beneuolorum [MS beneuolorum] discipulorum et pauperum, a presenti opere pretermissis noueruicis [or: nouiciolis, MS nouiculis] iuris, opinionibus abrogatis ac disputatioribus uariis, ipsam ueritatis sententiam abstrahere . . . et de summa summum compilare.’ Compare this with the statement of the author of the summa discussed immediately below. Clm 665 fol. 145ra*: ‘Si quid sapit [capit Clm 9528] si quid [sic Clm 9528] intelligit sine ulamine et nube urberum inferioribus communicare sic [MS commutare se] tenebitur, studiose ita quod ad intentionem pietatis summe, summam casuum a uenerabil fratre Raymundo, ex uariis iuris et legum sententis in uno volumine coartatam simplicioribus abbreuiare studuius.’

27 Cf. with Raymond’s ending of the Summa de casibus 584.

28 Generally, the catalogues do not give enough information to distinguish between these summae. Other MSS that probably contain the above or similar summae are Huntington Library (Calif.) HM 57, Univ. of Michigan MS 89, Berlin, Götter 49, Oxford, Bodl. 36, Nu-remberg, Stadtbibl. VI. 48; Graz, Univ. 821 also contains a summa of this type. However, this was one of the eighty-eight MSS which (according to information from Dr. Maria Mal- rold) were lost at the end of World War II.
Explicit (title De dotibus): Qui etiam impensas necessarias et utiles in rebus dotalibus factas licite deducet, ululaptarias uero perdit. Explicit liber quartus et ultimus cum tota summa.

III. The Summa 'Quia non pigris'

Finally there is another anonymous summa, which is contained in three Munich manuscripts, Clm 16122 fol. 63ra-86vb, Clm 19802 fol. 135ra-163rb (ends in the middle of the penultimate title, De divorciis), and Clm 27302 fol. 12va-22vb, 25ra-48va. 29 Although the first and last folios of Clm 19802 are damaged, this late thirteenth- or early fourteenth-century manuscript is the best of the three. 30 Unlike the previous summae which have been described, this author did not take Raymond's Summa — which otherwise he used extensively — as a model for the structure of the text, but largely relied on an earlier summa [Incipit prologus: 'Hoc opusculum in tres partes'; incipit (title De decimis): 'Decime ut ait decretum'] which has been attributed to Conrad of Höxter. 31

29 The Summa is interrupted in Clm 27302 by a tract on fol. 23ra-24vb 'Excepta de geomancia,' which begins 'De marito et uxore, si uis scire quis eorum primo moriatur.' This manuscript also contains a Summa de casibus which still has to be placed in the penitential-literature, but appears to be a continuation and expansion of Raymond's Summa de casibus. The work is on fol. 50ra-153rb and begins 'Queritur de his qui scienter peccauerunt.' See Kuttner, Repertorium 446. Dr. H. Hauke of the Staatsbibliothek, who is preparing a catalogue of the Latin MSS not covered by the present published catalogue, has kindly informed me that the tract 'Queritur de his' in Clm 27302 is not complete. The first forty of the sixty-three titles listed in the beginning of the work are in order (to fol. 118ra), but from fol. 118rb to 147ra we have titles 47, 48, and 49, followed by the title De adulterio uel stupro (fol. 126ra*), which repeats (but is not identical with) title 39. Then come titles 55, 54, 56, 57 in that order, followed by two more repeated, but not identical titles, De symonia (fol. 147ra*) and De observantia iuveniorum (fol. 151ra*). The remaining sixteen titles are missing.

30 Clm 19802 is a paper manuscript from the fifteenth century. However, a parchment text of 'Quia in pigris' was inserted in the middle of the MS.

31 See Dietterle 24.520-30 and 26.79-80. On Conrad of Höxter see Kuttner, 'Pierre de Roissy and Robert of Flamborough,' Traditio 2 (1944) 494 n. 10; A. Walz, Compendium historiae ordinis praedicatorum (Rome 1948) 152; Michaud-Quantin, Sommes de casuistique 24-25. Twelve MSS of this Summa have come to my attention. Two attribute the Summa to Conrad, Clm 2956 fol. 75ra-106r and Prague Metropolitan Chapter I 28; two to Raymond, Graz Univ. 1434 fol. 105v-119r and Clm 19139 fol. 14v-27r (not complete); and one, which may be the oldest, to a certain Sibotus (Sibertus ?), Graz Univ. 1494 fol. 72r-121r. The Summa is anonymous in the remaining manuscripts: Assisi Biblioteca Comunale 635 fol. 1ra-15ra, Bamberg Theol. 99 fol. 132-152 (prologue is missing), Clm 22293 fol. 178ra-181ra (not complete), Graz Univ. 1294 fol. 164r-180v (prologue and end are missing), Prague Metropolitan Chapter K 12 fol. 1r-16r, and Freiburg Univ. 252. Whether Conrad was the author of this Summa seems to be still open to question. I hope to examine this problem in detail at another time. — Graz Univ. 1294 fol. 143r-163r also contains a late adaptation of Conrad's Summa. The author used nineteen of Conrad's titles, but left out all the legal citations and changed the wording of the text slightly. These titles are contained on fol. 143r-155r. On fol. 155v-159r the author included short dicta of legal rules which were important for the
The author did not divide his work into books as did Raymond and Conrad. The titles that he added to Conrad’s work were all taken from the canon law collections or Raymond’s Summa. He cited the opinions of Magister Prepositinus, Alanus, Laurentius, Raymond, William of Auxerre, and, most frequently, Tancred and Johannes Teutonicus. Since the author used the Gregoriana and did not cite any later canonists or legislation, it may be assumed that he wrote the work between 1234 and 1240.

_Incipit prologus_ (Clm 27302 fol. 12r): Quia non pigris et negligentibus, sed iugiter uigilantibus, [non oto torpentibus, sed uiriliter pro domino laborantibus,] eterno felicitatis corona promittitur, ne in foro presentis uite otiosus et omnino inutilis inueniar, ad erudicionem elementariorum, qui non solidum cibum sed lac puerilis scientie concupiscunt, et ad utilitatem pauperum, quorum facultates ad comparanda magna iuris volumina non sufficient, pro iuris consiliis que non nunquam ab eis maxime in foro penitentie requiruntur . . . mittere proposui non exquisiti sermonis uenustatibus aut profundis sententias, sed breuibus et leuibus notulis traditionem iuris canonici et ciuiles, tum iuxta diversitatatem casuum prosequendo, prolixitatem quantum ualeo fugiendo. [Melius est siquidem paues cum utilitate discere quam multis inutilibus auditorum animos perturbare . . .] (the author then asked the reader to correct any mistakes that he might find).

_Incipit_ (title _De iustitia et constitutionibus_): Iustitia est constans et perpetua voluntas ius suum unicumque tribuen, inst. de iustitia et iure (Instit. 1.1.1).

_Explicit_ (title _De dote_): Vel si cui donatur, prius moriatur, eodem titulo, Donatio. Explicit.

Manuscripts Cited

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, München</th>
<th>Clm</th>
<th>585 n.6,8</th>
<th>7208 IB</th>
<th>9664 IIB</th>
<th>22293 IID</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>665</td>
<td>IID</td>
<td>7212 n.6,8</td>
<td>14094 IA</td>
<td>27302 III</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2959</td>
<td>n.32</td>
<td>7631 n.15</td>
<td>14789 IID</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3042</td>
<td>n.13</td>
<td>7802 IIB</td>
<td>16122 III</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4595</td>
<td>n.5</td>
<td>7821 IIC</td>
<td>18755 IIA</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6020</td>
<td>IA</td>
<td>8021 n.8</td>
<td>19139 n.31</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9528</td>
<td>n.15</td>
<td>19802 III</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

non—laborantibus Clm 16122 (et forsan Clm 19802), om. Clm 2730233 elementanorum ⁴iuricum ⁴Melius—perturbare Clm 16122 (et forsan 19802), om. Clm 2730233 форум poenitentiae. An index of titles and subjects follows on fol. 159-163r*. The Summa begins Symonia est studioa cupiditas uel voluntas emendi uel tendendi aliqquod spirituale uel annexum spirituali. It ends, 'Item uota non possunt commutari nisi auctoritate dyoceasani episcopi uel domini pape.'

32 The first titles of the Summa are De iustitia et iure et constitutionibus, De consueludinis, De porochitis, De sepulturis, De decimis, De primicis et oblationibus, De regularibus et transeuntibus, De conversione coniugatorum, De voto, De negotios clericorum et laicorum.

33 Clm 19802 also has these additions, but the text is so badly damaged at these two points that I could discern only a word here and there — the texts seem to be the same as in Clm 16122.
As historians of medieval theology and philosophy increasingly turn to study intellectual developments in the early fourteenth century, it is natural that Robert Holcot, O.P. († 1349), should come to stand out as an Oxford master worthy of further investigation.1 During his own lifetime, when he was associated with the household of Richard de Bury, the famous bishop of Durham,2

---

2 William de la Chambre (Anglia Sacra [ed. Henry Wharton; London 1691] I 765, as