In August of 1957 Dr. Condrick retired from the faculty of the School of Law. This issue of the Review is dedicated to him. For thirty-seven years he was a part of the University, since 1923 as a member of the faculty.

Dr. Condrick began the study of law after a career as a railroader. He is proud of his membership in the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which he joined in 1911. He holds degrees from The Catholic University, Georgetown and Harvard, where he earned his doctorate in juridical science in 1934. In June of 1954 he was awarded an honorary degree by Assumption College at Windsor, Ontario, and in 1950 he was awarded the Bene Merenti Medal. Dr. Condrick has been admitted to practice before the District Court in the District of Columbia and before the Supreme Court of the United States.

The story of his degrees and his honors is a small part of Dr. Condrick's life history. He liked people. He has known more students at the law school than any other person has been privileged to know. He was loved by his students and he molded them into lawyers. On May 22, 1957, his students honored him at a luncheon attended by Dr. Brendan F. Brown, Dr. Condrick's colleague and dean of many years. After his retirement in August the Alumni Association of the School of Law honored Dr. Condrick at a supper. Testimonials were received from former students, former colleagues and members of the legal profession.

Dr. Condrick retains his active interest in the school and in his former students. He is missed by everyone. He cannot be replaced.
